Dr. Palmer presented the results of a two year study sponsored by the Snohomish Public Utility District. The study funded the development and application of a decision support system that guides the management of a hydropower system that provides drinking water, flood protection, and environmental flows for fish, in addition to generating energy. The study illustrated the benefits of the decision support system, described how it had been used on a weekly basis during the last year to aid in decision making, and proposed alternatives to current operating policies.’
